The value of intelligence in preventing food offending

Speakers: Steve - Head of NFCU Outreach

Steve has been with the NFCU for 2 and a half years. He has responsibility for a team leading the Prepare, Protect and Prevent elements of our work, reflecting the Home Office strategy for dealing with serious and organised crime which can include fraud.

The sharing of information and development of timely intelligence is key to identify threats and risks and deal with them as effectively as we can. The best way of dealing with offenders and the risks they present is to do it collaboratively where we can.

We have developed some good relationships with LA TS partners, there is more to do.

Aaron Esler - Acting Head, Food Standards Delivery Team

Prior to joining the FSA in 2017, Aaron worked in local authority trading standards for 13 years, covering the full range of TS enforcement duties including food. In the FSA Food Standards Delivery team we are currently coordinating and delivering a pilot to test a new delivery model

FSA LA pilot and NFCU will discuss the value of intelligence in enabling priorities to be identified and addressed in 2021 as the world continues to change. We will discuss the emergence of new products, sampling and what the recently shared NFCU Control strategy priorities may look like across the UK, together with an update on the Food Standards Pilot which is currently underway.

Both Steve and Aaron look forward to meeting you.
